"Ezio Tarantelli"

International Conference on Migration and Welfare

Rome (Italy)

11th and 12th May 2017

Organized by: CIRET - Interuniversity Research Centre "Ezio Tarantelli"

Call for papers

The increasing migration inflows toward Western countries have ignited a heated political debate worldwide. As a matter of facts, the research of a common plan to manage the massive immigration flows of economic migrants as well as asylum seekers and refugees that are crossing the European frontiers is one of the most compelling issues on which the EU countries have to interact. In this discussion, a view supporting the protection of local communities oppose to a view in favour of solidarity. The academic research has already contributed to the debate, but new perspectives and solutions are needed. The aim of the conference is to discuss innovative studies in the field of welfare, labour market, social preferences and protection of social rights.

Examples of questions addressed in the conference are the following:

- How do welfare policies cope with immigration?
- Are welfare policies changed along to cushion migration inflows or are they modified in order to discriminate foreigners to reduce the country's attractiveness and the impact on the public budget?
- How do labour markets react to such exogenous shocks?
- Which is the most affected group of the local population in the destination country and how are the political preferences influenced?

- To what extent EU and Member States legal systems provide for an adequate protection of human and social rights?

The conference will bring together scholars from various disciplines and fields presenting the results of the ongoing research and will favour an open debate.

Submission of papers by economists, lawyers and political scientists on those or strictly related questions especially from young researchers are welcome.

Keynote speakers:

- Christian Dustmann (University College London)
- Assaf Razin (Cornell University)
- Hillel Rapoport (Paris School of Economics)
- Jackie Wabha (University of Southampton)
- Laura Corrado (European Commission) - TBC
